

HRA Gray & Pape offers a full range of Cultural Resources Management services. Our experience includes fielding multidisciplinary research teams for the survey, testing, and mitigation of archaeological sites. We also provide cultural resources reports for compliance-related projects and as support for environmental documents (EIS and EA). Our historians and historical architects have experience throughout the country in the preparation of historic property management plans, Section 106 compliance reports, and documentation for the Historic American Building Survey and the Historic American Engineering Record (HABS/HAER). Our staff archaeologists, historians, and architectural historians are experienced in federal and state permitting processes, and familiar with local data repositories.

Our experience, expertise, and long-established relationships with state and federal oversight agencies assure our clients of innovative, responsive, timely, and cost-effective products that fully address their project needs. The qualifications of our multi-disciplinary staff meet or exceed all state and federal guidelines.
